HMRC's visibility into the market has improved dramatically. The agency now receives transaction data directly from major crypto exchanges and will gain automatic access to global exchange data from 2026 under the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD)'s Crypto-Assets Reporting Framework (CARF).

In general, both retail and institutional investors continue to focus on buying and holding tokens for price gains rather than staking them. Operating validator nodes requires substantial capital, technical know-how and uninterrupted uptime. It also exposes participants to risks such as slashing penalties and custody challenges. Additionally, in many jurisdictions, the regulatory treatment of staking rewards remains unclear.

Ben-Sasson said in a Monday post to X that he was doubling down on his opinion that "corpo" chains won't last because they are not aligned with a fundamental concept of blockchain, which requires them to get "rid of their position as a central entity."

As "creator capital markets" advocates hailed the stunt as a raging success, others pushed back. One X commenter said, "This could easily be a bad thing. We don't need more harassment, we need more quality content."

"We can build, or architect, or code cyberspace to protect values that we believe are fundamental. Or we can build, or architect, or code cyberspace to allow those values to disappear. There is no middle ground. There is no choice that does not include some kind of building. Code is never found; it is only ever made, and only ever made by us."

For years, the layer 1 conversation was dominated by Ethereum if you wanted composability and a broad developer base, Solana if you wanted speed and Cosmos if you wanted sovereignty. The choice of L1 felt like picking a trading venue, evaluating fees, liquidity and execution.
