At the start of the year, there were about $205 billion worth of stablecoins in circulation, according to data aggregator DeFi Llama. Within the past week, the total market cap for stablecoins has surpassed $302 billion. That kind of rapid growth will need to accelerate in the coming years to fulfill Standard Chartered's projections.

In contrast, in-kind redemptions allow funds to transfer Bitcoin itself, thereby avoiding the taxable event and shielding investors from collective capital gains burdens, Hiesboeck said.

As of late August, the regulator was weighing more than 90 ETFs tracking individual tokens, combinations of coins, and different strategies. Those applications, which once seemed unlikely, followed the raging success of spot Bitcoin and Ethereum ETFs, with the BTC funds alone now commanding about $150 billion in assets, according to data from analytics platform CoinGlass.

“This doesn’t mean the end of alt season,” said Gregory, though he issued a note of caution. While a rotation into altcoins is still on the table, Gregory believes that Bitcoin's declining bullish momentum may lead to a “bear trap that could flush out more leverage” before the market resumes its ascent.

In Australia, the ASX bars listed companies from keeping over half of their assets in cash or cash-like holdings, effectively ruling out DAT pivots.

Cross-border payment is one of the important application scenarios of blockchain technology. The traditional cross-border payment process is complex, involving multiple intermediaries, with long settlement time and high fees. In contrast, cross-border payments based on blockchain technology can realize direct peer-to-peer transactions, greatly simplifying the process, shortening settlement time, and reducing costs. Currently, several countries and financial institutions have begun to try using blockchain technology for cross-border payments. With the continuous maturity of technology and the improvement of regulatory frameworks, blockchain cross-border payments are expected to become the mainstream cross-border payment method in the future.
