A $50,000 windfall could be just the push you need to start building your financial future. With some smart planning and time on your side, it's possible to create financial stability for yourself and your family and even turn that money into a million dollars with some basic investments. Heres how to make the most of $50,000 and what you need to do to build wealth.Investing your money wisely is a professional way to manage it, either through a robo-advisor or a financial advisor. A robo-advisor takes the same process an investor would use but does it automatically based on when you need the money and how much risk you're willing to take. This option costs only $25 for every $10,000 invested annually. On the other hand, a financial advisor can also help manage your investments, but you'll need to find one who's aligned with your goals. Both methods can be successful, so it's essential to choose the one that works best for you. One key difference between the two is how much time you want to spend on your investments. Even if you manage your money yourself, you can still put in minimal time and succeed. Investing doesn't need to be difficult, even if you're managing the process yourself. You have a great investment choice available - an S&P 500 index fund - which includes stocks in hundreds of America's best companies and has averaged about 10 percent annual returns over long periods.You need it.Keep your currencies in one place, and convert them in seconds.Never worry about exchange rate markups, or high transaction fees when you spend abroad.Make your money go further, no matter the distance.Save money when you send, spend and get paid in over 40+ currencies. Consider the benefits of different types of investment accounts and how they can fit into your overall financial plan.You may want to split your $50,000 among multiple accounts, depending on their tax-saving benefits. For example, adding $7,000 to a Roth IRA can provide favorable tax treatment, while saving for college can utilize 529 plans with front-loaded contributions subject to the annual gift tax exclusion. However, some investments come with high expense ratios that eat into your returns. Actively managed mutual funds often have fees ranging from 0.25% to over 1%, eating away at your investment growth over time. In contrast, index funds offer a low-cost alternative for diversification and risk management.Diversifying your portfolio can help offset market volatility, and investing in small-cap stocks or international markets can provide additional returns. For nearer-term goals, bond ETFs offer a lower-risk option for balancing out risk.When it comes to retirement savings, consider maximizing your 401(k) contributions, especially if your employer offers matching funds. Traditional IRAs and Roth IRAs are other tax-advantaged options, but be aware of the annual contribution limits and funded with earned income.Tax efficiency also plays a role in investment decisions. Low-tax investments like stock index funds and municipal bond funds belong in taxable accounts, while high-tax investments like corporate bonds belong in tax-deferred accounts.Many investors rely on financial advisors to manage their account balance and collaborate with a team of experts to achieve their objectives. However, the typical percentage fee charged by these advisors can be substantial, averaging 1.05% of assets under management.Fortunately, many advisors offer complimentary consultations, allowing potential clients to discuss their goals and determine if an advisor's services are suitable for them. With this in mind, it is essential to research and choose a reputable financial advisor who aligns with your needs.According to Arielle, a NerdWallet expert on retirement and investing, finding the right advisor can be a daunting task.
